An Act for the relief of the settlers on the South side of Green River.

WHEREAS a number of people have settled themselves on the vacant land south of Green river under a belief that they were no longer liable to be taken by military warrants, & that the legislature would grant them settlements therefor, on paying a moderate price for the same, and it is therefore thought proper to pass an act for that purpose, therefore,

1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly, that every house keeper or other free person above the age of twenty-one years who shall have actually settled himself or herself on any land within that boundary set apart for the said officers and soldiers, on the south side of Green river, or any other vacant land within this state, which shall not have been personally taken by a military warrant on or before the first day of January next, and shall actually reside thereon at that time shall be entitled to hold any quantity of such land not exceeding two hundred acres including such settlement, provided they shall not include any fall tract or any body of one; that he or she shall on or before the first day of August next, make an entry thereof in the office of the surveyor of the county where the land lies, and pay for the same according to the directions and provisions of this act. And for the purpose of ascertaining who shall be entitled to land under this act;

2. Be it further enacted, that three persons shall be appointed commissioners, who, or any two of them, shall have power and authority to hear and determine the right of settlers under this act, at a court to be held at the court house in counties of Logan, and Green, on the first day of June and July and then continue by adjournment for the term of fifteen days at each place if the business should require it; any person claiming a settlement right under this act, shall before the said fifteenth day of July lay in the same before the commissioners and have their or his witnesses ready to support his or her claim, and if the said court shall be of opinion that the said claimant under this act is entitled to the same, they shall cause it to be located, specially describing the boundaries, and certify the same to the surveyor of the county where the lands lie, who shall make an entry of the same in a well bound book kept for that purpose, and shall thereupon file away the certificate as his voucher which shall accompany the survey of the land to the registers office, to be by him safely kept.

3. And be it further enacted, that the said court shall have power to compel the attendance of witnesses, to administer the necessary oaths, and to examine them touching any tiling material to the matter in question.

The clerks of Logan and Green shall attend the said court by himself or deputy & perform to them all the necessary duties of his office; & he shall be entitled to receive the usual fees for any services he may perform, to be paid by the party requiring the same, and in the usual way, exclusive of six shillings per day which he shall be entitled to receive for his attendance on said court, to be paid out of the public treasury on a certificate of his attendance, signed by the said court, and audited, if there should be as much money in the treasury arising from fees paid on certificates, and not otherwise.

4. And be it further enacted, that the said court shall have power during the term aforesaid, to hear and determine all disputes between settlers who claim under this act, and their decision shall be final and without appeal.

5. And be it further enacted, that in case of a contest respecting the right of settlers under this act the person who made the first improvement shall be preferred, and no person shall obtain a certificate for more than one improvement.

6. And be it further enacted, that in surveying the said settlement tracts it shall not exceed in its longest part, twice the width of its narrowest part, unless it shall be retained on the opposite sides by the lines of a prior right.

7. And be it further enacted, that the lands located by virtue of this act, shall be surveyed within six months from the said first day of August, and a plat and certificate thereof lodged in the registers office, within six months from the date of such survey upon which the register shall issue a grant for the usual fees; provided that the owner of every such survey, shall pay the sum of thirty dollars for every hundred acres, and the same rate for every greater or lesser quantity contained in his said survey; the money aforesaid shall be paid to the treasurer and his receipt for the same specifying therein for what it was paid shall be by the party lodged with the register after which the grant shall issue and not before.

8. And be it further enacted, that if the survey claimed by virtue of this act be not lodged with the register, and the money due on such survey be not paid on or before the first day of November in the year 1796, then the said survey shall revert to the state.

9. And be it further enacted, that the Governor shall appoint the said commissioners who shall be allowed the sum of twelve shillings per day for every day they shall be to do business, and in travelling to and from the place of holding their court; and for the purpose of paying them and their clerk to be appointed by them who shall receive twelve shillings per day, there shall be paid down the sum of three shillings upon any certificate of a settlement allowed, and should there be any money remaining in the hands of the clerk after retaining at the rate of twelve shillings per day for his own services, and paying each commissioner twelve shillings for his services; he shall pay the same in the public treasury, and take the treasurer's receipt therefor, and shall lodge the same with the auditor.

This act shall commence and be in force from and after the passage thereof.

BOSTON, January 5.

On Sunday last arrived in this harbor, the schooner Indultry, Capt. Atkins, in 31 days from St. Malo in France. He failed from thence about the 13th of November, but brought no news papers. His oral intelligence is melancholy; but nevertheless it is our duty to detail it. He declares, that affairs have so much depreciated in value, as to exchange now at the rate of 2000 for a guinea. This depreciation greatly distressed and irritated the common people; who after they had earned and received assignats, found it difficult, owing to their unskillful sale, to pass them to any one, even for articles of subsistence. They continually exclaimed against the New Constitution, which they conceived the cause of their recent misfortunes; they even remarked comparatively on their situation when they had restoration of monarchy. They are at the same time very anxious for a peace, even with England. About a week before falling news was received, of fresh communications at Paris. There were other disturbances than those early in October, which he also heard of: the particulars had not been received. The people had not elected their representatives; and notwithstanding the prevalent dissatisfaction, no corruption had taken place.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 16.

A letter from London of the 3th of November, received by the packet, contains the following information:

That M. Monroton was empowered to treat for peace, even to the relinquishment of Austrian Flanders; the negotiation with the British government was commenced, and proceeded with spirit for several days; when, in consequence of the party who sent out Mr. Monroton being thrown into the minority, probably on the question relative to annexing the Low Countries to the French Republic, new instructions were sent to him, in which he was ordered to insist of annexing Belgium to the Republic; as an indispensable stipulation. In consequence of this the negotiations were immediately broken off, and M. Monroton returned to France.

The war was growing unpopular, on account of the scarcity, which occasioned great sufferings among the poorer class of citizens.

The same letter states, that by two arrivals from Hamburg, and by accounts just received from Paris, the loss of the French in the late battles on the Rhine, was said to amount to 31,200 men killed.

Lexington, February 20.

The following article extracted from the Gazette Françoise of November 3, gives a succinct but clear account of the latest operations on the Lower Rhine:

Paris, Oct. 27.

The centre and right wing of the army of the Sambre and Meuse have now recovered the Rhine. The Austrians, far from molesting the Republicans in their march, appeared very desirous not to enter any of the evacuated places before they were ultimately convinced that the French did not intend to return. Jourdan's head quarters are established here. The whole left wing of the army, which according to all appearance will remain on the east side of the Rhine, is under the command of the brave Kleber, who has taken an advantageous position a little below Mulheim; his right wing is covered by the Rhine, the front of the river Wipper, and the left by the chain of mountains running between the Duchy of Bergh and the county of Mark. Therefore it seems to be the intention of the French Government not to keep possession of the fortress of Dülisfort, but also of the territory north of the Wipper, extending 35 miles from north to south and 25 miles from east to west, which is by far the best part of the last conquest.

Before the French evacuated the country between the Lahn and Sieg they took the precaution to transport on this side of the river, all the provisions and other articles that could have enabled the enemy to maintain their ground during the winter season on the Lower Rhine. The country where the Austrians are now posted, looks like a desert; they are obliged to transport the necessary provisions from distant parts of Germany and exert all to establish magazines, because they have no place of any strength to shelter them against a sudden invasion of the French, who are in possession of all the valleys.

All the vessels and ferry boats belonging to the east side of the Rhine have been seized by the Republicans who remain aloft matters of all the fortified islands formerly occupied by the Austrians. This circumstance indicates that the enemy will have no peace in their winter quarters.

[From the Aurora.]

The accounts of the defeat of the French army, before Mayence, and of Pichegru's near Mannheim, which was contained in a London paper of November 11, are either a link of that barefaced lie which is suddenly transported Clairfont from the sterile mountains of Belgia to the fertile plains of Aldenham, or the river Rose; or the pretended glorious victory of the Austrians will prove a mere repetition of events that took place about the beginning of October last.

The London Evening Mail says, "a messenger arrived from Mentz, with dispatches from Gen. Clairfont, dated the 31st ult. containing the news of his having gained the most glorious victory obtained during the war, by driving the French armies which were before Mayence, to the left bank of the Rhine, with the loss of all their artillery & baggage. On the same day General Wurmser attacked the French before Mannheim with equal success." After the Austrians had violated the neutral territory & driven the French from the left wing of the army of Sambre and Meuse. Jourdan, as a skillful commander, resolved immediately to retreat behind the river Lahn, and raised about the 8th of October the blockade of Cassel, which he opposed Mayence, on the right side of the Rhine. On the 13th the Republicans, who had crossed the Rhine where already 35 miles from the Citadel of Mayence, and that fortress stood only 10 miles from the right side as before the opening of the campaign. It being notorious that all the French troops stationed on the right bank of the river, opposite Mayence, had withdrawn by the 13th of October, how could Clairfont on the 28th, or even on the 14th October, have driven the French before Mayence, and drive them to the left bank of the Rhine? Did Clairfont take the large pallisades of Cassel for a republican army, in battle array, and after a sudden attack against the old-time wooden heroes pretend to have driven the French to the other side of the Rhine though they had crossed the river at least a fortnight before?

The intended victory of Wurmser will turn out to be the mere result of a skirmish between the out posts of the garrison of Mannheim, and the Austrians; for the army under Pichegru had not moved from the left bank of the Rhine, except about 15,000 foot, and 2000 horse, which took possession of Mannheim; though the German accounts speak of engagements with Pichegru's army, as if it was to pack up an army of 27,000 men, within the narrow limits of a fortress which at the highest rate cannot harbor more than 15,000 men, besides the inhabitants which amount to 21,000.

So many absurdities have been published on the critical situation of the French garrison at Mannheim, that it will not be amiss to drop a few words, which will enable our readers to form an idea of the natural strength and importance of that place.

Mannheim lies 45 miles south of Mayence and 52 miles south of the Rhine, on a point of land at the confluence of the rivers Neckar and Rhine, and commands the navigation of both rivers. It is justly reckoned one of the most beautiful cities of Europe; the streets are broad and straight, the houses exceedingly neat, and all of one height and built after the same plan. It was formerly the residence of the elector Palatine; and for this reason and its vicinity to the French Frontiers, we no pains nor costs have been spared to render it as impregnable as Germany. Its fortifications always kept in repair, were considerably increased since the beginning of the present war, and surpassed in extent of strength the extensive works of Mayence, which require a considerable army to guard them. Its artificial strength is considerably increased by its advantageous position; being almost surrounded by the rivers Rhine and Neckar, and inaccessible, except on the south east side, where the point of the land opens into a spacious plain commanded by the crossing of the batteries of the place and occupying not a single eminence to favor the approach of an enemy. The communication of Mannheim with the westward to the Rhine is secured by means of a bridge of boats, founded on one side by the batteries of the fort, and on the other by cannon of the Rhine fort, which is a strong citadel built on an island of the Rhine, and commanded by the city of Mannheim as well as the accounts to it—35 long as the Republicans are in possession of Mannheim, the Austrians cannot venture into winter quarters; and will probably strain every nerve to retake that important post; but if the Republicans display their usual bravery in the defence of Mannheim there is no doubt but they will maintain it in spite of all the efforts of the enemy, who in this case will have no other choice left but to make peace or give up the remainder of Germany at the opening of the next campaign.

Mr. PHILIP HAMMAN who lives about 8 miles above the Iron works, on Slave creek, gave us the following information:—That on Tuesday last, the westward bound Indian (one with long beard) came to his plantation in his absence, and cut the cloaths of a negro woman who was out at work, killed one hog and stabbed another, and threatened his life, saying, "We know the God of a Jew; it was he that cut our hair; never from Point Pleasant to Dannelly's fort, at Green Brier, & got 26 of us killed, & we'll have his scalp before the Summer is out."

FROM JAMAICA.

RU MOU.

We heard several times yesterday, (but we could not trace it to any authentic source,) that the French had repudiated themselves at Ile de Dieu, in the Bay of Lifey, on which the English army has continued since the defeat at Quiberon—and which has been the rendezvous of all the subsequent reinforcements from England. The report adds, that Monsieur, the Count D'Artois, being then on the island, and unable to gain the shipping, fell a prisoner to the French. The expedition is said to have been effected in flat bottomed boats from the Main, from which the island is about 14 miles distant.

We thus mentioned the report, being sensible we should be attacked as partial, if we neglected to—but it is our duty to say, we know no reason for crediting it.

ANECDOTE.

A Scottish parson, in his prayer book, laid his great council of parliament, and grant they may hang thee. A country fellow standing by, replied, "Yes, yes, with all my heart, and the sooner the better; and I am sure it is the prayer of all good Christians."—"But I don't mean as that fellow means," (said the parson, but they may hang together in accord and concord.)—"No matter what cord, replied the other, it is but a strong cord."

WHEREAS Howell Lewis made an entry of 1250 acres with the surveyor of Fayette, beginning one quarter of a mile south of the encampment made by the army marching against the Indian towns, in the year 1780, on the night of the thirtieth of July, about 13 miles from the forks of Licking, and about five miles from the head of bank lick creek, and to run from the beginning N. W. 420 poles, thence N. E. from each end of this line for the quantity, And also one other entry of 5250 acres on the dividing ridge, between Grassy Creek and the middle fork of Bank Lick Creek, beginning at the top of the ridge, on the trace leading to the creek from the forks of Licking, at a red oak with many chips in it marked I F then to run S. W. 820 poles and thence N. W. at right angles from both ends to include the quantity, in both of which enclose an intended and design pursuant to an act of assembly entitled "An Act to ascertain the boundaries of lands and for other purposes" and an order of the court of Campbell county, to take sundry depositions, proving the respective beginnings commissions for this purpose will meet at the house of Squire Grant in Wilmington on Wednesday the first of next April and I have proceeded to the place of encampment, which is near to said town, to establish the entry, and at the house of Mr. Archibald Reel, on the day following, to establish the place of beginning of the entry of 3250 acres which is near to Mr. Reel's on the dry ridge.
